Course name:	Contemporary Italian Literature
Course level:	LITT 3002 FELA
Programs offering course:	Ferrara Liberal Arts
Language of instruction:	Italian
U.S. Semester Credits:	3
Contact Hours:	45
Term:	Fall 2019

Course Description

The course starts with some fundamental questions: “What is the history of literature?” and “What is a literary canon?” It then proceeds with the analysis of one literary genre: the contemporary short novel. Chosen texts are analyzed from a structural, linguistic, and stylistic point of view in relation to the literary historical context. Special emphasis is placed on the cinematographic adaptation of texts considered in class.

In the first module, students are introduced to the current debate on the literary canon and the general movement of expansion and rethinking of the Western literary categories, through references to post-colonial, gender and cultural studies. In order to challenge a significant example from the contemporary Italian canon, the course focuses on the short story as strictly related to the Italian society and the local historical context described by authors of the second half of the 20th century such as Primo Levi, Giorgio Bassani, Antonio Delfini. The second module accounts for the short story as a literary genre used by young contemporary authors in order to measure themselves against the literary production of their age and get prepared for a future masterpiece. This cluster spans generations of modern Italian literature, beginning with Pier Vittorio Tondelli to the hyper-contemporary production that opens up the literary canon to female writers, such as Valeria Parrella, Dacia Maraini and Susanna Tamaro.

An essential part of this course is the literary representation of local contexts, proposed by a double-site visit in Ferrara and a field trip to Modena, following in the writers’ footsteps to understand how literary creation develops in Italy. We will also consider the relationship between literature and arts, cinema and music, in particular the cinematographic adaptation of Bassani’s Una notte del ’43 as well as the common cultural background of Italian music and literature through the Seventies.

Learning Objectives

The course gives students an overview of Contemporary Italian Literature through a chronological insight of the short story as both training and explorative genre for Italian writers.

Students will:

- Learn to question the cultural issues concerning the Western literary canon;
- Build a descriptive and analytical vocabulary to understand and describe the Italian local contexts;
- Analyze literary masterpieces within the genre of the short story in their historical and cultural context;
- Deepen their awareness of the history of Italian literature and society in some critical periods;
- Develop the necessary linguistic, stylistic and analytical tools needed to properly tackle literary texts;
- Familiarize with the diversity of artistic modes of representation of youth in relation to literature, movies and songs;
- Become intimately acquainted with the city of Ferrara and, more broadly, with Emilia-Romagna region as a case study for artistic production.

Course Prerequisites

A good knowledge of Italian is required in order to actively participate in classroom discussions.

Lectures, seminar sessions, site visits, field trips, research assignments, film screening, song listening.

Online Resources

All required readings, slides, supplemental digital resources and additional information will be available online at Canvas. Therefore students are not required to purchase any textbooks.

Assessment and Final Grade

1. Oral presentation:	10%
2. Midterm exam:	25%
3. Final exam:	25%
4. Term paper:	15%
5. Participation:	25%

Course Requirements

Oral Presentation

The oral assignment consists in a 10-minute presentation on a short story chosen by students. Considering the research interest of each student, the instructor suggests short stories from those listed on the reader. Each student will resume the chosen short story and briefly provide an analysis which links his short story to the topics discussed in class.

A detailed bibliography is fundamental, because it reflects the validity of the material students intend to use for the oral presentation.

Midterm Exam

The first part will consist of 3 open questions about the assigned readings and lectures. The second part asks students to choose 3 extracts – selected by the teacher especially for the exam – from short stories already studied in class and write a brief critical analysis (from a stylistic, cultural and historical point of view).

Final Exam

Students will be evaluated by a written assignment. Students are asked to make a comparison between two short stories listed in the reader. Both texts will be selected from 6 extracts provided by the teacher in relation to the exam. Students will argue their personal motivation concerning the mutual relationship of the two chosen texts and of both texts with the notion of the literary canon, in order to illustrate their relevance within the history of the contemporary Italian short story.

Term Paper

1. Pretend you are an editor who has to publish a short story collection of Contemporary Italian Literature for the publishing house minimum fax specialized on the contemporary short story's genre. Your aim is to propose a new reading or itinerary within the genre in order to reformulate some questions about the Italian literary canon.
You are asked to select short stories from the Reader and write a Preface to your ideal anthology in order to justify a new reading of the Contemporary Italian Literature and a consequent rethinking of the customary literary canon. You can focus on some innovative topics:
 - The short story as a historical narrative (from the Neo-Realistic literature to postmodernism)
 - Giving voice to marginal topics: short story, surrealism and the Gothic model
 - The illusion of a live recording: short story and the mimetic description of reality
 - Young style of writing: short story as an exploratory language for novelists
 - The collections of short stories: differences of degree and style
 - The fictional representation of the non-metropolitan areas (Ferrara, Bologna, Modena)
 - The short story as a literary language for misrepresented writers (young people, woman, etc.)

2. The topic will be determined in discussions with the course instructor during office hours, or in ad hoc tutorials. Paper outline must include one-paragraph thesis statement and at least 4 short stories from 3 different authors.
3. All essays must be typed on a computer and double-spaced (c. 1.000 words, excluding footnotes and bibliography). Students are expected to send the paper to the instructor via email by the deadline specified on the weekly schedule. Late submissions will be penalized one half grade for each day they are late. Extensions are granted only in special circumstances, such as serious illness or bereavement.

Attendance and Class Participation

Students are expected to attend regularly and participate actively in class. Students missing more than 2 lessons will be penalized one half grade for each lesson missed. Quick-write tests will be administered at the beginning of each class session. Students are expected to do the readings and assessments in advance, so as to be familiar with the language and style of each writer included in the reader, and to participate in class discussion.

Students are reminded that plagiarism (presenting another person's work as one's own) is completely unacceptable and will result in the student receiving a FAIL for the term paper. To avoid this, always make sure that references and other people's ideas are cited correctly. If you are unsure about how to cite a reference, check with the course instructor.

Laptops, mobiles and other electronic devices are not allowed in the classroom.
