Course Description

At a first sight, Italy shows a great cultural complexity. Linguistic and ethnic minorities live peacefully together with “ethnic Italians”, while regional diversity in dialects, customs, and popular culture constitutes a sort of lively patchwork. A deeper analysis, though, reveals that Italian social landscape is made of a relatively recent immigration from all over the world.

Mass immigration to Italy has a relatively short history, that nevertheless changed dramatically over the last ten years. From the first Moroccan workers in the mid-1980s, passing through the Albanian migration of the mid-1990s, to the most recent refugee crisis, immigration laws have changed along with the management of the flows and the population’s perception of the phenomenon.

Through the study and the critical analysis of documentary materials, articles and newspapers, the course aims to present a pan of the actual multicultural Italy, and to offer insights on specific issues such as: the construction of a stereotyped figure of the migrant (man and woman) and some possible alternative concepts; the rhetoric over migration flows; migrant families and the so-called second generations (G2); the construction of the identity in migrants’ sons and daughters; the evolution of the Italian reception model.

Learning objectives

The course aims to convey information over immigration flows in Italy by an evaluation of its dimensions and the study of how the phenomenon is managed and perceived by the Italian population. From a methodological perspective, students will be encouraged to reflect critically on the immigration phenomenon, to decentralize their opinions and points of view, and to recognize the culturally massive presence of stenotypes and prejudices.

Course Prerequisites

Good knowledge of the Italian language.
Methods of instruction

During the course, a different set of activities will be held, such as lectures, seminar sessions, site visits, field trips, research assignments, film screenings.

Online Resources

All required readings, slides, supplemental digital resources and additional information will be available online at Canvas.

Assessment and Final Grade

1. Oral presentation: 10%
2. Midterm exam: 25%
3. Final exam: 25%
4. Term paper: 15%
5. Participation: 25%

Course Requirements

Oral Presentation
Students will interview locals in order to investigate their perception of the immigration flows, and provide an analysis of data for the other students (10 minutes), based on methods learned during the course. The oral presentation outline must include at least 2 printed sources chosen among essays, books, monographs, or magazines.

Midterm Exam – 2 hours
In the first part of the exam, students will be given extracts from critical texts on immigration and multiculturalism already studied in class and they will comment on them; in the second part, students will be given short newspaper articles concerning immigration and multiculturalism, which they will analyze and comment at the light of what they have learned.

Final Exam – 2 hours
Students will be given a short title from which they will write a short essay (max. 500 words) by doing reference to the literature and materials studied during the course and the data collected for the oral presentation.

Term Paper
Students will carry out a case study over one of the subject studied during the course. The topic will be determined in discussion with the course instructor during office hours. Paper outline must include at least two printed sources which could be identified with the teacher’s advices during office hours. All essays must be typed on a computer and double-spaced (c. 1,000 words, excluding footnotes and bibliography). Students are expected to send it to the instructor via email.
Late submissions will be penalized one half grade for each day they are late. Extensions are granted only in special circumstances, such as serious illness or bereavement.

Class Participation
Students are expected to attend regularly and participate actively in class. Quick-write tests will be administered at the beginning of each class session. Students are expected to do the readings and assessments in advance, so as to be familiar with the subjects, and to participate in class discussion.

Students are reminded that plagiarism (presenting another person’s work as one’s own) is completely unacceptable and will result in the student receiving a FAIL for the term paper. To avoid this, always make sure that references and other people's ideas are cited correctly. If you are unsure about how to cite a reference, check with the course instructor.

Laptops, mobiles and other electronic devices are not allowed in the classroom.
